“ Lois, and family,

I was so sorry to hear of Paul's passing. Though I only knew him- and you and your lovely family- through our multiple visits at Saint Francis and Mount Sinai, I quickly grew to appreciate the kindness, warmth, and depth of his character. Those visits were not really about a newspaper or mints, but about learning about the incredible person and wonderful life Paul and you had together, and it warmed my heart to share even a few moments with him and with you. I am heartbroken for you all, but emboldened by the Truth that Paul is again with Sara and his siblings.

Please accept our deepest sympathies.

“ To Brendan and Family,

We were saddened to learn of your Dad's passing. Losing a parent is indeed painful. For they were always the one to cheer you on when you didn't believe in yourself...they helped you through tough times and life just doesn't seem quiet right when a parent dies.

While I didn't know your Dad...I COMPLETELY recognize him :) and know that your parents did a fabulous job raising thier children- as is evident by you Brendan and the special person I've come to know ...especially the stories my brother Dan tells of you in your football days and, of course... my special pal Sara- who I just adored in high school and who made me laugh like a hyena with her grand spirit and love of life.

While I wasn't able to come to W.H today...I deeply wanted to reach out and let you know I was thinking about your family.

It's comforting to know that Sara has your Dad by her side now. :) And in the end...we'll all be together.

God Bless you all. xx

“ My brothers and sisters and I went to school with the Grady "kids" at St. Thomas and Northwest - Paul, Sara, Brendan and Meg were the "nice kids," they were smart, friendly, inclusive and kind - you get that from your parents. Paul and Lois "walked the talk" of being good people and evidence is the quality of their children. I have a funny vision of Mr. Grady and my dad, they were members of the West Hartford Indian Guides, both wearing the indian headress full of feathers up at the camp and dancing around the fire - what good sports! (Oh the things you do for your kids!!) We're so sorry for your loss, we know you'll carry forth your dad's warm and humorous spirit.
