“ My condolences to Perry's closest friends mentioned in his Death Notice. Many years ago we met thru mutual friends, Tom & Elaine Kawa. The four of us were team-mates in an East Hartford bowling league. I remember Perry as a well-dressed attorney, a gentleman & fun person with a great sense of humor. I would see him during lunch hour in downtown Hartford as we both worked in the Hartford National Bank building.
Rest in Peace Perry...your 'cases' are now permanent record!!!!imported-begin##Colette Moore##imported-end##

“ Perry and my husband, Tom Kawa were best friends. Perry was Tom's best man at our wedding on May 3, 1969. He taught us how to play bridge and we played on a weekly basis until 1978 when we moved to Salem, NH. Tom died on October 29, 2011 in Philadelphia. We went to Wilmington, DE to visit our daughter, Nicole and he fell ill.
I am so sorry for the loss of Perry. He was a great guy. He will be missed by everyone he met during his lifetime. He was so much fun to be around.
Rest in peace, Perry and say Hi to Tom for me and Nicole.
I just received his obituary today from a friend of mine who lives in CT. Perry, Tom, Colette and I use to be on a bowling team together for years. She was kind enough to send it to me. Thanks Colette!!!!imported-begin##Elaine Kawa##imported-end##

“ I was fortunate to have known Perry for almost 25 years as a fellow lawyer who practiced in the ERISA/Retirement Plans area. I will very much miss our lunchtime excursions to the former 99 Restaurant on the Berlin Turnpike, during which we chatted about baseball, politics, Nantucket and ERISA not necessarily in that order.

I will miss you Perry!###imported-begin##Richard Cohen##imported-end##

“ From the perspective of a friend, Perry was a person of large appetites and passions. Whether it was the Red Sox, The New York Times, or bakery items, he enjoyed them with gusto. He was the catalyst for many “enthusiastic” conversations during the summer vacations on the Cape and Islands that we shared in the 70’s and 80’s. His contrasts defined him – he couldn’t fix a broken door knob, but he could cite the lineage of Britain’s Royal Family; He drove as badly as the drivers he criticized. His laugh was infectious; his annoyances were out of proportion. He seemed lonely but had an extended family. He will be remembered and missed.###imported-begin##Dave Novak##imported-end##

“ Perry was a remarkable person. A smart attorney, with an intuitive instinct and compassion for the underdog. He was well informed and had a curious mind. He loved his Red Sox, Nantucket, and was a generous friend. I will miss our monthly lunches.###imported-begin##Jeffrey Cullen##imported-end##

“ Perry had a very fine command of legal reasoning. I think back to times when he and I would contemplate the ironies so often encountered when noble principles of law conflict with common actions of people simply trying to deal with life’s daily issues. We would smile amusedly to one another as we thought about each situation and tried to make sense of it all. And, then — as if for no apparent reason — he would break out laughing. For, although he professed to hold the law paramount to the actions and decisions people make, he knew how little we could do about it, and that, in the end, people must be appreciated for who they are. — C’est la vie; c’est la loi. His laugh was infectious, making him a good person to be around. He will be missed. I extend my sincere condolences and prayers to those who were closest to him.##imported-begin##Tony Ludovico##imported-end##

“ I moved from CA to CT in 1973 to an apartment complex where I met Perry, and his many, many friends. Perry's spontaneity, exuberance, competitiveness and frequent laughter are very special memories-Bob, Steve, Dave, Sherrie, Bill, Diane...it was a wonderful time and Perry was so often the "event planner." My sympathies to his many friends and family. Michele##imported-begin##Michele##imported-end##
