“ As the editor of the East Hartford Gazette, to know Ron Dundin was to know all those he worked with over the years, always with great respect. We had a lot of fun in this work; Ron was not someone who tolerated BS as he strove to do capture the right photo, no matter what the conditions or circumstances. He was deeply moved by his subjects and interested in their story, whether it was the Boy Scout planting a flag on an veteran's grave or grieving over the killing of President John F. Kennedy. He became a friend to all his caretakers; a neighbor willing to give the shirt off his back once he got to know them, but always a newsman and photog. I know he admired, loved and held his son in the highest light, you really made him proud. Ron never made an excuse for his disabilities - he adapted and persevered, earning his high school diploma finally, one of his proudest accomplishments besides being a father. Take care, buddy. You are missed with every police and fire radio call I hear.
